Foreword

Nadeem Ghazi

‘May peace prevail on Earth’

Nadeem Ghazi

Founder-CEO

World Learning International Schools, Karachi, Pakistan

I am an educator, positive behavior change and peer mediation trainer by passion, a entrepreneur by profession, and a social worker by persistence. Having worked with 83,000 youth, students, teachers, and school administrators, I have had opportunities to influence others in far-fetched villages, marginalised communities, people with disabilities and relief camps. I am the Founder and CEO of World Learning International Schools and World Learning Educational Society that supports young minds and hearts with peace education in schools in Karachi, Pakistan, especially in Lyari Town, one of the world's biggest cities.

I worked as a Regional Coordinator for a peace education project in partnership with Peaceful Schools International Canada and the United States Institute of Peace. I have also been an international representative for The Peace Foundation, since I completed my internship in 2015. Every year we represent Peace Week Pakistan, and in 2016 more than 120 schools participated across the country.

Youth Peace Week gives opportunities to learn skills to understand each other and how to live well together. This Toolkit is a wonderful resource and benchmark to empower youth and schools to create a culture of peace in the classroom and community. I have witnessed thousands of students transform into peace leaders since I initiated this program in Pakistan, since 2011.

I admire and commend The Peace Foundation and efforts of their entire team and awesome leaders especially Christina Barruel who inspires me through her positive energy and mentoring. The Peace Foundation has enlightened many candles like me in the age of darkness and hatred. My services, prayers and support are always there with Peace Foundation and its noble cause for peace.

Book in a free REACT Workshop

GLOBAL

INVENTORY

As of 2023, there were an estimated 12,500 nuclear weapons in nine nuclear armed countries. Above is a graphic to show the global inventory.

The Peace Foundation provides free REACT (Responding to Armed Conflict) workshops to rangatahi and young adults. The purpose of these workshops is to raise awareness of past and present armed conflicts, emphasise nuclear abolition and disarmament, and engage youth in kōrero on these topics.

“THE PRESENTATIONS ARE HIGHLY TRANSFORMATIVE AND INSPIRE YOUNG RANGATIRA TO ENVISION A NUCLEAR-WEAPON-FREE FUTURE.”

An Introduction to Peace Icons

Who are Peace Icons?

This year, our theme, Celebrating Peace Icons: Past, Present & Future recognises those people who are making positive differences in our local, national, and global communities. We invite you to think of all the people who have, are, or will make a positive difference for peace, whether done through big or small actions.

‘Peace is its own reward.’

Mahatma Gandhi

Once you have explored this Toolkit, find one or more ‘peace icons’ who resonate with yourself, your kura, or your community. We invite you to then participate in some of the activities listed throughout this Toolkit or to come up with your own peace initiatives for the week. Don’t forget to share these on social media and tag:

#thepeacefoundationNZ
#youthpeaceweek2024
#celebratingpeaceicons
in your photos and videos.

Remember, youth and young people are leading the way in many areas for peace - you can make a difference too!

Inner Peace

These individuals dedicated time and effort to promote and guide others to self-discovery and tranquility, to encourage a harmonious connection between mind, body, and spirit.

Inner peace helps us to feel more calm and content in our daily lives and has many benefits for our health! Some of these benefits include; wellness and quality of life, greater empathy, and an ability to relate and connect with others.

A short list of Peace Icons:

- Dalai Lama
- Thich Nhat Hanh
- Sadhguru
- Laozi
- Jon Kabat-Zinn
- Tara Brach
- Thich Nu Chan Khong
- Marianne Williamson

Thich Nu Chan Khong

Khong is a Vietnamese peace icon and Buddhist monk who practices mindfulness, and advocates for peace in war-torn countries. Her name “Chan Kong” means true emptiness, and revealing the importance of inner peace.

Sadhguru

Sadhguru is a spiritual leader who emphasises the importance of inner transformation for a peaceful world. Sadhguru has inspired people globally to cultivate inner peace, and continues to nurture harmony among communities.

Dalai Lama

The Dalai Lama, through his teachings of kindness and understanding, epitomizes harmony and encourages empathy over enmity. His legacy as a peace luminary is a testament to love's enduring power to overcome discord in human history.

Tara Brach

Brach's focus on mindfulness stems from her own journey where she discovered the transformative power of compassion and 'being present'. She then became dedicated to share these practices with others.

“The practice of peace and reconciliation is one of the most vital and artistic of human actions.”

Thich Nhat Hanh

Thich Nhat Hanh born in Vietnam was a zen master, spiritual leader, and peace activist. He was a well respected monk revered across the globe for his teachings and writings on peace and mindfulness, and was a key figure in bringing Buddhism to the West. He published numerous meditation, mindfulness, and Engaged Buddhism works. Some notable ones being ‘The Miracle of Mindfulness’ and ‘The Art of Living.’ He also founded eleven monasteries and many Buddhism practice centres across Asia, America, and Europe. One of Thich Nhat Hanh’s greatest accomplishments is founding the International Plum Village Community of Engaged Buddhism; located in Southwest France, it is the largest international practice center for Engaged Buddhism in the West. Thich Nhat Hanh passed away on the 22nd January 2022 at the age of 95. He will be remembered as “...an Apostle of peace and nonviolence”, spoken by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Paint a Peace Mural

Get creative and paint a peace mural in your kura | school or community.

Pick a concept or design, and let your creative juices take hold! This activity is a great opportunity for you to take some time alone or in a group to reflect on what peace means to you.

Put on some music, and relax while creating a piece of peace art for others to enjoy!

Items you will need:

- Waterproof paints
- Paint brushes
- Jars with water (for cleaning your brushes)
- Newspaper, a drop cloth or tarpaulin so you can keep the paint where you want it!
- Overalls or old clothes
- Music, so you can jam out or relax.

Once your peace mural is completed, we would love you to share it with us using the hashtag #thepeacefoundationnz

Human Rights

Those who devoted their time and energy to promoting equality and freedom for everyone, and aimed to establish a fair and inclusive society.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 10 December 1948, serves as a universal benchmark for all individuals and nations. It outlines basic human rights to be safeguarded universally and has been translated into more than 500 languages.

A short list of Peace Icons:

- Kate Sheppard
- Sir Martin Luther King
- Rosa Parks
- Cesar Chavez
- Fredrick Douglass
- Nelson Mandela
- Mahatma Gandhi
- Desmond Tutu
- Mother Teresa
- Raoul Wallenberg
- Oskar Schindler
- Eleanor Roosevelt
- Leymah Gbowee
- Pauline Tangiora

Desmond Tutu

Tutu, a Bishop of Johannesburg, was awarded the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize for his role as a unifying leader figure in the non-violent campaign for anti-apartheid. Tutu's objective was to encourage democracy without racial division.

Pauline Tangiora

Tangiora is an advocate for indigenous rights and helped to inspire positive change, as well as keep te reo alive in Aotearoa, New Zealand. Closely related to our mahi, Tangiora is a patron of The Peace Foundation!

Eleanor Roosevelt

Roosevelt, a former First Lady of the US, was a human rights activist. During her lifetime, she advocated for more roles for women in the workplace, civil rights of African Americans and Asian Americans, and rights of World War II refugees.

Nelson Mandela

Mandela was a prominent anti-apartheid activist who became the first democratically elected President of South Africa. He spent 27 years in prison for his activism and became a global symbol of resistance to oppression and injustice.

“Darkness cannot drive out darkness: only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate: only love can do that.”

Martin Luther King Jr.

Martin Luther King Jr. was an influential leader in the American civil rights movement. He advocated for racial equality and justice through nonviolent protests and civil disobedience. King's famous "I Have a Dream" speech is a powerful call for equality and is still remembered today.

He advocated for nonviolent resistance to racial segregation and discrimination, and his efforts led to landmark civil rights legislation in the United States. His efforts helped pave the way for a more inclusive society. Martin Luther King Jr.'s impact on the fight for equality continues to inspire people globally with the commitment to building a world where every individual is respected, valued, and is given equal opportunities.

Community Project

Take time to learn about what your chosen Peace Icon is known for! We invite you to participate in a community service project inspired by your peace icon.

Human rights are a very broad category which incorporate civil rights, economic rights, political rights, cultural rights, and social rights. Once you have acknowledged which category your Icon belongs to, think about how you can implement their area of advocacy in your life through a service project.

For example, Nelson Mandela was known for his relentless pursuit of civil rights, in particular his work to end the apartheid in South Africa. To honour his legacy, you might engage in activities and coordinate service projects which promote racial equality. If your Icon was an advocate for economic rights, you might choose to volunteer a morning or afternoon at your local food shelter packing items for individuals and families in need. If your Icon spoke out for women's rights, then you might want to do a school collection of items that would be helpful for women living in refuges.

There are lots of options for engagement, and you do not need to be limited by organisations or projects that already exist. You could even start your own! Whether you are volunteering your time, raising awareness, or beginning a new project, the key is to channel the spirit of your chosen Peace Icon into meaningful action that contributes to positive change in your community and beyond.

Education

These individuals promoted and advocated for access and quality of education for all.

Education is an area acknowledged by the UDHR, and is important for individuals to navigate daily life while helping to eradicate poverty, and hunger. World Vision stated that in developing low-income countries, "there is a projected 10 per cent increase in a person's future income for every additional year of education." Despite it being recognised as a right, education is still a privilege for many.

A short list of Peace Icons:

- Yvonne Duncan
- Malala Yousafzai
- Maria Montessori
- Ela Bhatt
- John Dewey
- Angelique Kidjo
- Michelle Bachelet
- Julia Gillard
- Michelle Obama
- Emma Watson

Angelique Kidjo

Kidjo is a Grammy-winning singer and songwriter from Benin. Alongside her successful music career, she's a dedicated activist for women's rights, education, and humanitarian causes, often collaborating with UNICEF and other organizations.

John Dewey

Dewey was an American philosopher, psychologist, and educational reformer recognised for his "hands on education" philosophy. This ideology gave students more freedom, and allowed them to take initiative in their learning.

Ela Bhatt

Bhatt was an Indian activist who dedicated her life to help improve the lives of many poor women in India. She founded the Self-Employed Women's Association of India in 1972, and in 2007 joined a group of world leaders, 'The Elders' to promote human rights & peace.

Maria Montessori

Montessori was an Italian physicist who advocated for children's rights to education. Her vision was to reconstruct society and establish world peace through education. To achieve this, she integrated peace education into her curriculum, which has since grown globally.

“One child, one teacher, one pen, and one book can change the world.”

Malala Yousafzai

After surviving a horrific assassination attempt by the Taliban in 2012, Malala Yousafzai turned a tragic situation into a catalyst for advocacy for girls' education in Pakistan's Swat Valley.

Despite receiving numerous death threats, she continues to speak out for equity in education. Part of the ways she has achieved change has been through her establishment of the Malala Fund with her father. This organisation empowers and supports young girls to 12 years of age, safe and free education. She has addressed the United Nations to openly speak about how more needs to be done to ensure no girl ever finds herself putting her life in danger to receive an education. She became the youngest Nobel Prize winner after receiving the Nobel Peace Prize in 2014. Her story is a reminder of the power of education and advocacy and the importance of standing up against oppression and injustice.

Poem or Speech

In this activity, you will create a poem or speech, honoring the remarkable contributions of your Peace Icon.

Poem

Think about how you feel about the Icon, what their contributions are/were, and how you can express these thoughts and feelings in the form of a poem.

Speech

Start your speech with a brief introduction to set the tone for a reflection on the life and work of your chosen Icon. Consider the difference that they have made, and how it is relevant to the world that we live in today. Draw inspiration from their activism, and reflect on personal experiences and insights to elaborate your speech.

Then, share your poem or speech in a supportive and respectful environment.

To extend on this activity, have an open discussion about your chosen Icons and share with your peers what you have learned, and one takeaway about the Icons.

We would love for you to share your written work with us using the hashtag #thepeacefoundationnz .

Disarmament

People who have dedicated time and effort to promote and foster a world free from the threat of armed conflict.

Campaigns, activism and advocacy for disarmament have influenced government, and international organisations to create and sign agreements, treaties and initiatives to reduce nuclear arsenals. This has also encouraged nations to commit to diplomacy and cooperation to foster a peaceful and secure future without nuclear weapons.

A short list of peace icons:

- Helen Caldicott
- Dr Daisaku Ikeda
- Joseph Rotblat
- Linus Pauling
- Ban Ki-moon
- J. Robert Oppenheimer
- Jody Williams
- Beatrice Fihn
- Alyn Ware

Alyn Ware

Ware, is an educator, organiser and campaigner in the areas of peace, non-violence, nuclear abolition, international law, human rights (including gender and children's rights) and the environment.

Jody Williams

Williams is an American activist who played a significant role in the campaign to ban landmines, which led to the creation of the 1997 Ottawa Treaty. For her efforts, she received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1997.

Linus Pauling

Pauling, a Nobel laureate in science, was also an ardent advocate for peace. His activism against nuclear weapons earned him the Nobel Peace Prize in 1962, making him the only person to receive two unshared Nobel Prizes.

Helen Caldicott

Caldicott, a physician and anti-nuclear advocate, was a leading voice in the disarmament movement. She raised awareness about the consequences of nuclear weapons and nuclear energy, highlighting the urgent need for disarmament.

“It is the younger generations who hold the key to creating peace. No one is born hating others. Prejudice and discriminatory attitudes are ingrained during the process of growing from childhood into adulthood.”

Dr. Daisaku Ikeda

Dr. Daisaku Ikeda was a Buddhist philosopher, peacebuilder, educator, author and poet who dedicated his life to conducting dialogues with world leaders as a central means to resolving conflicts, addressing global challenges and building peace. Ikeda was born in Japan to a family of seaweed farmers and experienced the devastation of WWII at a young age, which fueled his quest to solve the fundamental causes of human conflict. He was the President of the Soka Gakkai International (SGI), a lay buddhist network which is engaged in actions to promote a culture of peace and non-violence, based on the core tenets 'human revolution' and respect for human dignity.

January 2, 1928 - November 15, 2023

Paper Cranes

Sadako Sasaki and 1,000 Paper Cranes

On August 6, 1945, two-year old Sadako Sasaki was at home in Hiroshima, Japan when the United States dropped an atomic bomb on her city. Soon after the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Imperial Japan surrendered and World War II came to an end, but the impacts of the bomb were just beginning to reveal themselves. Sadako sustained no obvious injuries in the bombing. Ten years later, she began having medical complications, and was diagnosed with leukemia (an atomic-bomb disease).

According to Japanese tradition, if you fold 1,000 paper cranes a wish will come true. Paper cranes have become symbolic as a reminder of the children who died as a result of the atomic bombings, and is related to the story of Sadako. Sadako decided to fold 1,000 cranes in the hope she would get well again. She folded 1,300 cranes from her hospital bed before she died in 1955 at the age of 12.

As you make the cranes, reflect on what peace means to you. You can even write a message of peace on the crane before you fold it.

Environment

People who have dedicated time and effort to promoting harmony between humanity and the natural world.

These environmental advocates have fostered a deep reverence for the natural world. Their messages resonate across cultures, inspiring others to join in the pursuit of a more peaceful and sustainable future, reminding us of our interconnectedness and shared responsibility to protect our planet and safeguard the well-being of all its inhabitants.

A short list of Peace Icons:

- Sir David Attenborough
- Steve Irwin
- Jane Goodall
- Winona LaDuke
- Chloe Swarbrick
- Greta Thunberg
- Sir Peter Blake
- Wangari Maathai
- Vandana Shiva
- Sylvia Earle

Sir Peter Blake

As a sailor and environmentalist, Blake was extremely passionate about conservation and future generations. His expeditions raised awareness about the oceans and he founded the Blake Expedition Trust to support environmental research and education.

Steve Irwin

Irwin, "The Crocodile Hunter," was a well-known Australian wildlife expert. He raised awareness of respecting and protecting wildlife, emphasizing the need for humans and animals to coexist harmoniously.

Sylvia Earle

Earle is a marine biologist whose leadership founded the Mission Blue Organisation, that aims to raise awareness and inspire action around ocean protection. She is the first female to lead the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration.

Sir David Attenborough

Attenborough is dedicated to raising awareness about the beauty and fragility of nature. His advocacy encouraged changes in the public consciousness of the planet, inspiring individuals and organisations to foster peace with the natural world.

“We all have a choice. We can create transformational action that will safeguard the living conditions for future generations.”

Greta Thunberg

In a world grappling with the urgent crisis of climate change, Greta Thunberg, a young activist, ignited a global movement demanding accountability from world leaders. At age 15, she began skipping school and protesting outside Swedish Parliament calling for stronger action on climate change.

Her environmental activism sparked ‘Fridays for the Future,’ which has become a global climate movement, and inspired millions to join the fight for our planet's future. Through her climate advocacy, Thunberg has helped to address world leaders, raise awareness of the urgency of climate change, and influenced policy changes.

Greta Thunberg is a symbol of hope and resilience, reminding us all that the power to enact change lies within each one of us.

Rock Painting

Painting rocks is a fun and a creative activity that allows you to express yourself!

Items that you will need:

- Smooth, clean rocks of various shapes and sizes.
- Paint: Acrylic paints work well for rock painting. They come in a wide range of colors and are durable once dry.
- Brushes: Different brush sizes will allow you to create various details and effects.
- Palette: Use a palette or disposable surface to mix and blend your paint colors.
- Water and Paper Towels: For rinsing brushes and wiping off excess paint.
- Optional: Sealant/varnish to protect your finished rocks outdoors.

Before you start painting, think about what designs or patterns you want to create on each rock. You can sketch out your ideas on paper or plan them directly on the rocks with a pencil. You might even want to experiment with different techniques to create texture and depth in your designs. Once you are ready, start painting! Allow the paint to dry completely between layers and before handling the rocks to prevent smearing.

Once completed, display them in an outdoor space, you could even hide them for people in the community to find and spread the message of peace too!

Share your rock paintings with us using the hashtag #thepeacefoundationnz .

Indigenous Rights

People who have dedicated time and effort to amplify the voices and defend the rights of indigenous communities worldwide.

Indigenous rights encompass the fundamental rights of indigenous peoples worldwide, recognising their unique cultural, social, economic, and political identities. Upholding Indigenous rights involves acknowledging historical injustices, promoting cultural diversity, and fostering inclusive and equitable societies.

A short list of Peace Icons:

- Wilma Mankiller
- Oren Lyons
- Taiaiake Alfred
- Dame Whina Cooper
- Rua Kēnana
- Rigoberta Menchú
- Pauline Tangiora

Dame Whina Cooper

Dame Whina Cooper was an advocate and activist for Māori rights. She is best known for leading the Land Hīkoi in 1975 from Te Hāpua to Parliament to present a petition signed by 60,000 people to protest against the continuing loss of Māori land.

Oren Lyons

Lyons was a peace advocate who upheld traditions and history of the Turtle Clan of the Onondaga Nation, and was part of a 1977 indigenous delegation that demanded the recognition of indigenous people in America.

Taiaiake Alfred

Alfred, through his academic work and activism, advocates for the recognition of the injustice faced by indigenous communities. He continues to empower indigenous communities to fight for justice by advocating for self-governance and reclaiming land.

Wilma Mankiller

Mankiller was a Native American activist and social worker who became the first woman to be elected as Principal Chief of the Cherokee Nation in 1987. She was passionate about social justice and received the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1998.

Rua Kēnana

Kēnana, a descendant from the Tūhoe region of the North Island, was a peacemaker who advocated for the rights of his people who were struggling with the invasion of European settlers and the decline of their cultural, and ancestral way of life. His philosophy was centered around the idea that Māori and Pākehā communities could live in harmony and coexist peacefully. He championed the rights of his people, the Tūhoe. He established the community of Maungapōhatu, a self-sufficient settlement located in the Urewera range that sought to create a sanctuary where Māori could preserve their cultural heritage, practise customs, and live peacefully. Kēnana faced adversity in the wake of this settlement and was imprisoned, but continued to advocate for reconciliation and understanding between Māori and Pākehā. His teachings emphasised compassion, forgiveness, and understanding.

Learn a Language

Learning an indigenous language is important for preserving cultural heritage and promoting intergenerational continuity within indigenous communities.

Research: Research resources that offer instructions on how to go about learning your selected indigenous language.

Immerse Yourself: Immerse yourself in learning that language whether that be through watching videos or reading books to help familiarise yourself with the language and its techniques.

Consistency: Practice regularly! Consistency is the key to learning any new skill.

Learn the Culture: Language and cultures are closely intertwined. Learn about the culture to deeply appreciate the importance of the indigenous language.

Continue Learning: Stay motivated and understand that learning a language is a life-long skill.

Indigenous languages embody unique worldviews, knowledge systems, traditions and histories. The revitalization of indigenous languages enhances a sense of pride and identity among indigenous peoples, empowering them to reclaim their linguistic heritage in an increasingly globalised world.

Arts

People who have dedicated time and effort to showcasing the profound impact of art in shaping our perceptions and understanding of the world around us.

Art is a powerful tool to express the desire for peace and harmony among people. Through art, peace is promoted by challenging thoughts and perceptions, and inspiring social justice. Art for peace removes language barriers and fosters a sense of shared humanity through displaying the artists vision of a peaceful world.

A short list of Peace Icons:

- John Lennon
- Maya Angelou
- Yoko Ono
- Banksy
- Frida Kahlo
- Pablo Picasso
- Ai Weiwei
- El Seed
- Ibiyinka Alao

Frida Kahlo

Kahlo was a Mexican artist known for her vivid self portraits that depicted physical and emotional pain. Her paintings explored identity, feminism and Mexican culture, and indirectly advocated and sparked discussions on peace.

Ai Weiwei

Weiwei is a Chinese contemporary artist who is recognised for using his art as a form of activism. He reveals and showcases political ideas, and the importance of human rights.

Yoko Ono

Ono, an artist, musician, and peace activist, gained prominence in the 1960s for her avant-garde art movement. Her work often challenges traditional boundaries and explores themes of peace, love, and social activism.

Pablo Picasso

Picasso, a Spanish painter and sculptor, was one of the most influential artists of the 20th century. In 1949, he designed the 'Dove of Peace' artwork for the World Peace Congress in Paris which became a worldwide symbol of hope.

“You don't need planning permission to build castles in the sky.”

Banksy

Banksy is a mysterious British street artist who has masterfully used their art as a vehicle for promoting peace and social justice. The distinctive stencil-based works often carry powerful messages, addressing themes such as politics, war, and capitalism. One of their famous pieces from 2003 called "Bomb Hugger" shows a young girl cuddling a bomb like a teddy bear. It shows that even in times of conflict, innocence is present, highlighting how strange and sad war can be.

Their art serves as a form of peaceful protest, sparking conversations about pressing global issues. By blending art with activism, Banksy inspires viewers to reconsider their perspectives and take action towards a more peaceful and equitable world. In a world often divided, Banksy's art serves as a powerful reminder of our shared humanity and the importance of striving for peace.

Fashion Show

3, 2, 1, Action! Celebrating Peace Icons in style!

Fashion Show or Mufti Day

Organise a Fashion Show or Mufti Day at your kura dedicated to celebrating Peace Icons. This is a fantastic opportunity for students (and teachers) to delve into the lives and legacies of individuals who have made significant contributions to peace and understanding in the world. During this event, also encourage people to share a brief presentation or story about their chosen Icon to highlight their contributions to their area of peace. After sharing stories, hold a runway showcase as an opportunity to celebrate diversity and creativity with this activity.

Fashion Design Competition

Also consider organizing a Fashion Design competition in your kura. Invite students to design a clothing piece inspired by their Peace Icon, incorporating elements of their Icon's life, beliefs, or achievements into their designs. This not only encourages creativity and innovation, but also provides a platform for students to express their admiration for their chosen Peace Icon in a tangible and artistic way.

Share your amazing outfits and designs with us using the hashtag #thepeacefoundationnz .

Remember to respect the Peace Icons and their unique backgrounds.
